Arabs Set $2.35 Billion For Arms Chest Fund

RABAT, Morocco, Oct. 29 (Reuters).-Arab leaders agreed today to contribute $2.35 billion a year to build up the military forces of the frontline Arab states, conference sources said. This was a modification of a Syrian proposal for an initial sum of $13.35 billion which a number of Arab states complained was too high, the sources said.

The money was expected to be contributed by the Arab states in general, with most of the burden borne by the rich oil producers, they added.

France Begins Soundings On 3-Sided Oil Conference

By Don Cook

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The French government has begun diplomatic soundings to see whether it will be able to organize early next year a three-sided, 12-member conference of oil consumers, oil producers and developing nations, it was fearmen today.

Meanwhile nine nations have now given their formal agreement to join the American-spon sored oil-sharing plan under which they will automatically pool their oil resources if they are hit, either individually or collectively, by another Arab embargo. The nine which have, so registered their acceptance of the plan are the United States, Canada, Japan, Belgium, the

Red Police Halt Jews' Protest, but Make No Arrest

MOSCOW, Oct. 29 (AP).-Three young Soviet Jews demonstrated here today for the right to go to Israel and—in a rare move-police intervened but let them go free instead of taking them into custody.

It was the first Jewish dem-ed the scene said that it was the first time that he could remember that police released demonstrators on the scene. Most participents in Jewish demonstrations receive sentences of 15 days in jail. A few have been released after several hours in custody.

For about three minutes, the three—Alexei Targonsky, Mikhail Liberman and Anatoly Malkin— held np signs saying. "Visas in-stead of Prison" and "Stop persecuting Jews." Plainclothes police approached the demonstrators and took their pictures but did not arrest them. Uniformed police arrived and tore up the signs, but left the men standing there while they telephoned, apparently for instruc-

But it remains to be seen how moch enthusiasm will be accorded the French proposal for a limited three-sided conference. The idea was first put forward hv President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing at a press conference last week, at which he said that France would like to see such a conference take place with the aim of moving toward "cooperation" with oil-producing countries. He said that it was in the interests of both oil producers an. oil consumers to avoid international economic convulsion, and added that the aim of a three-sided conference would be to guarantee oil producers regular value on their revenues by pegging oil prices to some sort of

The French President also said that he hoped that the European Economic Community would be represented at any such oil conference "as a single bloc." (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Almost Every Country Involved in World's Greatest Search for Oil

By William D. Smith

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (NYT).—The greatest search for oil in history, for alternative sources to the Middle East fields where most of the world's known reserves now lie, is under way as a direct result of quadrupled off prices.

Every systable drilling rig is either in action or on its way to new locations. In the United States alone, 1,500 rigs have been operating, a 25-per-cent rise this year. They are looking not-only for new fields but, since the rising prices have changed the structure of the industry, they are also going over previously discovered or even exploited regions that had been thought Almost every nation is husy with some form of oil activity, from geophysical exploration to actual drilling and production. There are several common conclusions to be reached as a result of this activity so far: • No one expects to find an area that will rival the Persian Guif simply because the optimum geological conditions that have made the Middle East such a petroleum reservoir do not exist anywhere else. Most future efforts and likely large discoveries will be offshore.

. Oil is harder to tap and is becoming more costly as the search has moved offshore and to some of the more forbidding nlaces on the globe. ...

New Wells Drilled at Record Rate; Old Areas Are Prospected Anew

 Increasingly, existing producing areas will be reworked because of improved geophysical techniques and use of new recovery methods.

How much recoverable oil is there? Most estimates place present proven world reserves at about 600 billion barrels, with about two-thirds of this in the Middle East. At the present rate of prodoction of about 21 billion barrels a year this would last for less than 30 years. Over the last 100 years, some 295 billion barrels have been consumed.

Estimates of future world discoveries vary, but one by British Petroleum forecasts likely finds of about 760 billion barrels, with a further 310 billion barrels theoretically possible. The search areas:

· Mexico and Central America-The most exciting recent discoveries have been made in the Reforms fields in the southeastern Mexican states of Chiapes and Tabasco, operated by the Mexican state oil company. Petrolees Mexicanos. The fields have grown in a little more than a year from less than 20,000 barrels to more than 240,000 barrels a day, making expected.

· South America-The Amazon Basin areas of Ecuador, Peru and Colombia are the principal oil-search regions. Ecuador produces about 200,000 barrels a day and is believed capable of 1 million barrels a day. Peru has no major production yet from its Amazon area, but it, too, expects to become a major producer. Colombia, the first country to discover oil in the Amazon area, now faces a production decline. Venezuela, the largest producer on the continent, has been extensively explored and most analysts expect any new discoveries there to be expensive and major finds unlikely.

. The North Sea-Because of its proximity to the oil-hungry European market, the search for oil in the North Sea is particularly important. Major discoveries have been made under-neath the stormy waters off Britain and Norway.

If expectations are fulfilled, North Sea reserves could climb to 40 billion barrels, or more than those of the United States, including Alaska's North Slope. Production is slightly more than 50,000 barrels a day, mostly from Norway's Ekofisk field, but the experts expect a rate of between 3 million and 5 million barrels a day by 1980. • The Arctic-The best hopes for finding oil fields of (Continued on Page 2 Col 7)

Saudis Are Said to Plan Oil-Price Cut

By Terence Smith

RABAT, Morocco, Oct. 29 (NYT).—Saudi Arabia plans to announce shortly a modest reduction in the price of its oil and the freezing of the price at the new level for a year, an informed Arab source said here yesterday.

Saudi Arabia, which recently has been urging other oil-producing countries to agree to a joint reduction will announce a unilateral cut of less than 10 per cent within a week, the source said The other oil-producing countries he said, are expected to follow with similar reductions shortly thereafter. He said that the current posted price of roughly $11.65 a barrel would be reduced by less than a dollar

The impact of the proposed cut will be impossible to judge until details are made clear because of the complicated nature of crude-oil pricing. A minor cut in just the $11.65 posted price, the artificial price on which company royalty and tax payments to the governments are based, would be more in the nature of a goodwill gesture than anything of consequence to the world's economic

On the other hand, if even a small price reduction is applied to all oil exported, by all petroleum-exporting countries, the say-ings to the United States in a year could count to $1 billion or

The Arab source said that under a complicated formula oil prices would come down while royalties and taxes paid by the oil companies to the Arab countries would rise. Oil-producing countries' revenues would thus remain

The reduction would be the first that any of the oll-producing countries has agreed to in response to worldwide demands. The Arab source said that the Saudi decision to reduce the price unilaterally as a first step had been accepted by the oil-producing nations. The source added that the other countries had rejected the Saudi idea when it was raised at the recent meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna but had subsequently agreed to follow the Saudi initiative. The drop in prices is expected to be described as a gesture toward Europe and the other developed countries for their political support of the Arab cause.

Edward Heath, leader of the opposition Conservatives, said the proposals were "totally irrelevant" in the House of Commons, he denounced the nationalization proposals, said the speech bore an "air of unreality" and added that the Labor party seemed intent on dividing rather than uniting the nation.

There is no chance of getting at the roots of home-generated inflation unless we can have national unity to deal with it," said Mr. Heath, who was ousted as prime minister in February and suffered another defeat in the general election Oct. 10. Mr. Wilson, who earlier had

In the Queen's speech and again in the debate, the government stressed that the heart of its concente program stemmed. from the "social contract," an un-written agreement with trade unions to hold down inflationary wage demands in exchange for programs, for social equity. The Queen described the contract as an "essential element" in the strategy to cmb inflation, now approaching a rate of 20 per cent. The pursuit of more national-ization and proposals for increasing taxes on the wealthy are part of the understanding with the trade unions. The government said it would pursue its "aim of achieving a fair redistribution of income and wealth." On oil, the government wants the right to insist on acquiring

Experts interviewed about the change emphasized that it does not represent a back-to-the-farm movement. The farm population has stabilized to the point that there has been no significant change in the number of persons living on farms in the last five years. But interstate highways, paved rural roads, and the accessibility they provide to new jobs have enabled many farm people to commute to a job.
Employment Growth

A more important pattern, how-ever, is movement of people into towns and small cities near large communities that have experi-enced considerable employment growth because of manufacturing

Underlying it all is a basic shift in the living preferences of mil-lions of Americans in the last two decades. For many years, urban life and the variety of jobs available made the great metropolitan areas considerably more attractive than rural America.

In the last 10 years, however public-opinion polls have recorded a radical change in these preferences. A poll conducted for the U.S. Commission on Population in 1971 found that 64 per cent of Americans preferred to live in a rural area, a small city, or a town. Other polls show similar preferences, although a substantial number of those choosing ruralsmall city life also wanted to live within 30 miles or so of a large

Answering reporters questions during the weekend, Mr. Ziegler brought the subject around to the issue of Mr. Wixon's San Clemente life style since he resigned Aug. 9 and moved there. Mr. Ziegler, who seemed pre-

Once they were the unchal-lenged symbols of unswerving chauvinism, But these days, as the country approaches another election, many of them are struggling with that approach. New Kind of Uncertainty

Scandal in high places, the resignation of Spiro Agnew, the departure from office of Richard Nixon and his subsequent pardon by President Ford, the offer of conditional amnesty to draft evaders and deserters, the soar-ing cost of living-all of these have taken their toll on their political psyches and a new uncertainty is emerging among

Wounded Knee Trial Is Seen' Priming Explosive Situation

By Bryce Nelson

PORCUPINE S.D., Oct. 29 .serious, insisted one of the hundreds of letters sent by white residents to U.S. District Court Judge Fred Nichol, protesting his dismissal of charges against two leaders of the American Indian Movement's occupation of Wounded Knee.

The letter illustrated a grim situation: Tensions between whites and Indians in the northern plains area and to a lesser degree, among Indians them-selves, are explosive.

Some knowledgeable persons have said that the possibility of violent clashes between armed groups in the Dakotas and Neraska should not be treated lightly. A top aide to South Dakota's Gov. Richard Kneip warned of the "explosive situation between Indian militants and white militants" and reported alleged Indian terrorism directed at white ranchers and business Indians interviewed said they were tired of being pushed around by whites, and some whites maintained that they would not be pushed any more by Indians.

Need to Arm Many whites and Indians feel the need to arm.

"We don't even think we need a spark any longer, said a top state law enforcement official who asked to remain anonymous. We think the fuse was lit when the dismissal of the charges against Russell Means came up in [court in] St. Paul [Minn.] . . . The attitude bere in South Dakota became so tense that we were terrified . that Means was going to show up somewhere in the state. I was getting calls that be would never live through another confrontation."

Several bundred members and supporters of AIM seized the historic hamlet of Wounded Knee in February, 1973.

The Indians demanded that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee re-examine the nation's Indian treaties and asked for an investigation of government treatment of Indians. After 71 days of tension and some violence—two Indians were killed and a U.S. marshal was seriously injured—the insurgents laid down their arms and submitted to

Berlin Issue Is Hampering Talks by Schmidt, Brezhnev

The Chancellor devoted about two-thirds of a meeting this morning with Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexel Kosygin to a discussion of the West Berlin issue, before turning to the matter of economic cooperation, including longterm, large-scale joint projects-

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and his Soviet counterpart, Foreign Mmster Andrei Gromyko, also joined in the talks before moving on to their own parallel negotiations. This afternoon, Mr. Schmidt held further economic discussions with Mr. Kosygin, but returned at 5 p.m. for a private meeting with Mr. Brezhnev on bilateral political issues, which presumably again included West Berlin.

At a briefing this evening, a West German government spokes-

At the heart of the West Berlin issue is Bonn's right to represent legal and other institutions of the city. The Soviet Union has insisted upon interpreting the 1971 four-power agreement as making West Berlin a separate political Today's Kremlin discussions were officially characterized as "constructive," "friendly and "concrete." But informed West German sources expected that any real progress would be in the economic rather than the politi-

The two countries today signed an agreement granting the Soviet Union a 10-year credit of 1.5 billion marks ($575 million) for the purchase of 950,000 tons of German large-diameter steel pipe.

Possible Concession In a possible political concession, the Russians were reported willing to consider letting West Germany run a power line from a proposed nuclear power complex to be built by West Germans at Kaliningrad, on the Soviet-Polish border, directly through West Berlin, The city could then have direct access to the power rather than rely on a relay from East Germany.

In a blunt speech last night, Mr. Brezhnev urged "strict observance" of the 1971 agreement on West Berlin, Mr. Schmidt assured him that Bonn was complying and in return asked for its "full implementation," which would presumably allow Bonn greater flexibility in its relations

U.S. Army Project to Destroy Millions of Birds Is Opposed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UPI). —Environmentalists are opposing an Army plan to kill 14 million birds this winter by spraying them with a chemical that will cause them to freeze to death. The project affects two Army installations—Fort Campbell, Ky., and the Milan Army ammunition plant in Tennessee-where the Pentagon said huge flocks of the birds pose hazards to human bealth, aviation and farm crops. The Environmental Defense Fund is threatening to take the Army to court because it said that an "environmental impact statement" should have been filed. Such a statement, the fund said, would allow outside scrutiny of the project

The Army said it has determined that "the project will not create significant local regional or national impacts on the environment and that no significant environmental controversy is associated with the project."

The Army said that one reason it wanted to get rid of the birds was that there have been three cases of lung disease associated with the birds among Army per-

The plan is for helicopters and planes to drop a detergent—lime chemical mixed with water—on the roosting areas when the weather forecast is for rains and falling temperatures: The chemical takes the protective oil out of the birds' feathers and when the temperature drops below 45 degrees they are chilled and eventually die of freezing.

The bird populations consist of 50 per cent starlings, 25 per cent grackles, 20 per cent cowbirds and 5 per cent redwing blackbirds.

Stories told by Westerners who have participated in the organization of the fairs are legion, but the prize this year must go to the Swiss. Behind the quibbles, however, is the larger question of whether the trade fairs re worth the amounts of government funds involved-nearly $2 million for Canada's fair two years ago, $1.5 million for the Australians, and a similar sum for the British display earlier th The official rationale for the fairs is that they are the only effective means of demonstrating a country's trade potential to the Chinese trading organizations that make the purchasing decisions. Behind this reasoning lies the assumption that, long term, the Chinese market for Western technology will be lucrative. The assumption is one that only time will test. But there are many diplomats here who believe that recent purchases dozens of British and American aircraft, complete steel mills from West Germany and Japan, petrochemical plants from Japan and France-have given a misleading impression of the market potential and, thus, of the value of the trade fairs.

"Let's not forget that China with its 800 million people, is buying about as much on the international market as Taiwan, with its 15 million," observed a Western envoy who unsuccessfully argued against his govern-ment's decision to hold a Peking

Testifying at Bordeaux Trial

Wine Experts Admit Confusion in Tasting.

BORDEAUX, Oct. 29 (Reuters) International wine distributors admitted today at the Bordeaux "winegate" trial that they some-times could not tell the difference between chesp and quality wine.

The distributors gave evidence on the second day of the trial of 18 wine traders accus doctoring or mislabeling nearly three million liters of wine.

The distributors, called by the defense, backed up the claim by defendants Lionel and Yvan Cruse that they had bought doctored wine without knowing it was an illegal mixture.

2 Men Indicted In U.S. Theft Ring

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (UPI) .- A Cook County grand jury yester-day indicted two suspects in the biggest cash burglary in American history on charges of partici-pating in a multi-million-dollar stolen-goods ring.

A federal magistrate held another suspect on $400,000 cash bond—described as a precaution against possible underworld attempts to silence him. A fourth suspect was named in a com-plaint linked to the $4.3-million burglary of the Armored Express Co. vault on Oct. 20.

Peter Gushi. 47, a self-styled "master criminal." and James (Jimmy the Greek) Maniatis, 53, were named in the indictments as members of a ring that state said dealt yearly in stolen mer-chandise valued at $5 million.

Although only 0.5 per cent of Bordeaux'e annual production is involved in the alleged scandal, shock waves from the trial have spread worldwide. The Cruses are major exporters and are among the leaders of the wine aristocracy here.

Dutch distributor Guus Verbunt told the court that publicity about the trial had harmed sales prospects for French wine.

Mr. Verbunt was one of the experts to testify that he could get confused in distinguishing between a cheep table wine and a quality Bordeaux, particularly when young. Switzerland's André Donze said he would not like to be the president of a tasting council set up to spot the difference. He added that even chemical analysis "does not tell you where the wine comes from." Torben Anthon, head of Cruse's

Danish outlet, was asked if he could distinguish between a "noble" Bordeaux and a table wine. He replied, "I could, but it would be very difficult."

Frand Squad Report

The prosecution, basing its charges on a lengthy fraud squad report. alleges that cheap wine from the Mediterranean area was transported here and, along with other inferior local wines, bottled as a distinguished Bordeaux red.

Testifying to the Cruse family's and Cook County investigators international professional reputation, British importer David Rutherford said: "If the wines are good, the customer will continue to buy."

The Cruse cousins, after shak-ing the hand of each distributor, then took the stand as the case moved into a technical investigation of the company's records.

Apart from the criminal pro-ceedings, the Cruse family and the other defendants face a civil charge for a nominal one franc (about 20 cents) in damages from the Bordeaux Wine Association for the harm the case has done to the profession.

The judge put the Cruse courins through a stiff examination on how they kept their records. Testimony on Documents

The prosecution alleged that documents essential to their inquiry had either been destroyed or altered.

But Yvan Cruse insisted that no frand had been perpetrated. In an impassioned plea, he told the jammed courtroom: "I rub things out, I scratch things ont, but I tell the truth," According to the trial records, some of the firm's wine casks bore unusual markings such as "Bordeaux type." "Meursault base," or "can be used for Beaujolais in United States"

More Questions Than Answers

The decision of the Arab leaders in Rabat to recognize the Palestinian Liberation Organization as the "sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people," with authority to set up an independent government on any areas of the West Bank or the Gaza Strip vacated by Israel, has been asserted as a triumph for Arab unity. But it actually raises more questions than it answers.

Even the unity is suspect: Jordan's apparent renunciation of its claim to the West Bank left a curious atmosphere of indecision in Rabat, a feeling that unspoken or unpublicized qualifications were added to the declaration that would give Jordan so uneasy a neighbor as a Palestine governed by old enemies of King Hussein.

There is also the question of just how representative of the scattered Palestinians -as well as of those still living in their accustomed areas—Yassir Arafat's primarily guerrilla group really is It can be argued that in cases such as this that the fighting forces, whether they are a revolutionary body, like Castro's, or a liberating force like De Gaulle's Free French, are an almost inevitable governing element, at least initially. And the Palestine liberation movement has already received a wide measure of international recognition.

But it has also, by its acts and its various statements of its goals, aroused many animosities, among Arab host states, like Lebanon and Jordan, as well as in Israel. The crucial issue is whether, given these animosities, a peaceful settlement of the Middle Eastern situation is possible.

That the fate of the Palestinians is central to such a settlement is perfectly obvious. But whether this is to be done by an adjustment between Israel and Jordan, as those countries would prefer, with, presumably indemnities for those voluntarily or involuntarily displaced from their lands, or whether there should be, as the original UN plan proposed and Arab leaders now accept, an independent Palestinian state is, m itself, a many-horned Assuming an independent state, what viable boundaries can be created for it? And will it be regarded as simply a base for the reconquest of all of the old Palestine, or as an entity prepared to live in peace with all its neighbors?

The world, including the UN, which has a special responsibility under the circumstances, must insist upon the latter kind of state, if one is to be created. The Israelis would be highly skeptical of any independent Palestinian government; they would, if they accepted such a creation at all, insist upon guarantees, in all probability. Would Arafat and his Arab supporters accept such limita-

Diplomacy, along rational lines, could still do much to reduce the threat of renewed war in the Middle East and open some avenues toward a lasting coexistence of the jarring ideologies and cultures there. But it must be admitted that this wil be far more difficult now, under the weight of the questions raised in Rabat.

Key-Country Action

The chief danger of a turn from "stagfla- . tion" to world depression lies in the temptation for the oli-consuming countries to try to export their collective $60 to $80 billion in oil payments deficits to each other. Adoption of import curbs, export subsidies, currency devaluation or domestic deflation by . an oil-importing country to balance its trade is possible but it could only lead to retaliatory trade restrictions and a shrinking volume of world business.

The industrial countries were quick to see this and to pledge themselves to carry their own oil debts and to avoid beggar-my-neighbor measures. There have been a few deviations. But most countries have refrained from restrictive practices, with only one large loophole remaining: concealed stimulus to sales abroad through government-subsidized export credits.

That loophole now is being closed by a sixnation agreement on uniform standards for export credits by the United States, Japan and the four chief nations of the Common Market-Britain, West Germany, France and Italy-whose five other partners are expected to follow suit They have agreed to charge a minimum of 7.5 per cent interest for longterm government-financed export credits, those extended to any country for five years or more. In addition, they have agreed that no government financing at all will be extended either for medium-term or long-term export credits, those for three years or more, in trade among themselves or with more than a dozen other wealthy countries, including the wealthy ofl-exporting nations.

Negotiations, stalemated for months, will ontinue for an overall "gentleman's agreement" by all the industrial nations covering all aspects of export credits worldwide, including duration of loans and repayment terms as well as interest rates. But the interim six-nation accord on governmentsubsidized interest rates, which was achieved at a private meeting of finance ministers last month in Washington during the International Monetary Fund conference, solves the more critical half of the problem.

Perhaps more important, it demonstrates again that common policies for the industrial nations and vigorous action to meet common problems-delayed endlessly by traditional diplomacy—can be accelerated by private decision-taking meetings of ministers and senior officials of the five or six key countries. The interests of smaller countries must be protected of course. But in an era of growing interdependence, this new "cancus" approach to multilateral diplomacy is pointing the way not only to effective action on immediate problems but to the new kind of international institutions that must be constructed if Western civilization is to survive. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

South Africa on Trial

Conflicting crosscurrents are affecting the UN Security Council debate on South Africa. The council still has no substantive resolution before it, but has now reached the stage where a resolution, or resolutions, must soon be formulated and put to the vote. The delay in this being done is symptomatic of the crosscurrents, particularly among the 41nation so-called "African group" which was responsible for bringing the matter to the council in the first place. It was this group which sponsored the resolution passed hy the General Assembly on Sept. 30 by 125 votes to one (South Africa). It called on the Security Council to "review the relationship" between the UN and South Africa. Nine countries abstained from the vote on it, including Britain, the United States and Basically, the dilemma facing the African group is whether or not to go for a motion calling outright for South Africa's expulsion. This is advocated in a draft being circulated by Kenya, Mauritania and Cameroon. The disadvantages of such a course are obvious. Even if it attracted the necessary nine votes, it would certainly be vetoed by Britain, or the United States or France, or all three. None of these countries supports apartheid, all condemn it. But as Mr. Callaghan rightly observed last week, they believe all nations should be in the UN, whatever their policies.

There are, however, deeper considerations affecting members of the African group than the mere arithmetic of voting or vetoing.

Much is changing with great rapidity in southern Africa, especially the attitude towards its neighbors of the Vorster government

-From the Daily Telegraph (London). The Threat of Starvation

Much attention has been focused, here and elsewhere, on the problems of inflation and energy shortage in the industrial nations. Yet in almost every respect inflation and the shortage of food is a more serious problem for two-thirds of the population of our world. Next month sees the convening of the UN World Food Conference in Rome. It is not hyperbole to say, in the terms of one of the preparatory documents for the conference, that "... a prodigious effort for the mobilization of resources, physical financial and human, is called for-an effort based on the realization that human society is indeed confronting one of the most crucial problems that has ever occurred in its long history."

There must be doubt whether the direct results of the Rome conference will reflect such a realization. For while the developing world is only too well aware of both the longterm and short-term problems of world food supply and demand, it is much less certain that they are recognized for what they are in the power centers of the industrial world. American public opinion and the Congress seem to be entering a phase of introspection, in which neither foreign military adventure nor overseas economic aid and cooperation are politically easy . . .

LA CROIS-VALMER, France.— Adenauer's work of reconcilisation The Federal Republic of Germany survived the dramatic change from Chancellor Willy Brandt to Helmut Schmidt surprisingly well. The technical operation was smoothly done, not without pain but at least without shedding of blood.

Would it be too presumptuous to say that this test confirmed the maturity and stability of West German democracy, which began its life under most unfortamate circumstances—almost as an orphan left by the Allied powers on the doorsteps of a defeated people—and is now grown up and self-confident, even in

The Christian Democratic opposition is powerful. Its first leader, Chancellor Konrad Adenaver, had the historical merit to bind the Federal Republic's destiny once and for all to the Western world.

'High C'

The letter C, often called the "high C." in the name of the Christian Democratic Union (or. in Bavaria, CSU, for Christian Social Union) stands for a questionable ambition.

No party can be truly Chris-tian without profaning the mean-ing of Christianity and Christendom. The CDU is neither conservative nor socialist . nor straightforward reactionary, but rather a mixture of all those elements-it is anti-ideological and ideologized at the same time.

The lask of clear ideas in the sense of an old political heritage has a certain attraction. But the integrating force that kept the broad spectrum of opinions and competing groups together was the chancellorship so long as the Chancellor was a Christian Dem-

But in opposition, the CDU is struggling with an identity problem for which no solution is in sight but the resumption of power over the state. Consequently, the style of opposition against the Social Democratic-Free Democratic government is often ir-

Dr. Adenauer was a forceful conservative. His political roots reached far into the 19th century; beyond the period of Bismarck, into the world of the confederation of German states that had its first place in Metternich's well-balanced and well-tempered Concert of Europe.

Great Old Man

The great old man of the postwar period was fiercely anti-Prussian. He resented deeply the arrogant and unruly Prussian power in the east that-in his eyes had shaken a period of peace that had lested for half a century, until 1870. Dr Adenauer underrated the social restlessness of the growing industrial tionary force of the emotions that sought liberation and fulfillment within the ideal of one nation.

Not only nationalism but also -political liberalism and the urge for social justice remained foreign to him.

He was a democrat of sorts, deeply devoted to the rule of law and, therefore, unshakable in his contempt for the barbarians in brown shirts who had stamped on the Europe that he loved The patriarch of the new Germany seemed to overcome the shadow of Bismarck eventually, and more than one of his political opponents were ready to praise him as the founder of a new, reliable and rational conservative tradition. But, within his own party. Dr. Adenauer's advocacy of a German federalism could not prevall over the Bismarckian line

His successor, Ludwig Erhard, the master of the miracle of West Germany's economic recovery, stuck to an old-fashioned and somehow naive liberalism with some nationalist undertones.

After he and Kurt Georg Kiesinger had left the scene and the Christian Democrats found themselves out of power and in the cold of opposition, they started to seek new popularity with their ruthless fights against. DARIS. - Forty-five years ago the Great Hepression began with a crash on Wall Street and by the time it staggered to its half the whole world had been shaken out of fat-dripping illusions. Now we appear to be on or over the brink of a similar collapse although—as in 1929 few leaders are willing to admit it and even the prissy word "recession" is disliked.

After the 1929 stock exchange breek, respected Pollyannas like Herbert Hoover and J.P. Morgan for months saw affver linings obscuring every cloud. We now seem in a similar period; leader-ship allence with respect to the facts is almost thunderous. From Tokyo to Washington via Paris and London one hears again those comforting coos from political pigeon cotes that nothing drastic ed be done, And, indeed, securities regulations and social in-surance have eased the shock.

Mired in Chaos

Tinly is mired in chaos. Portugal hovers on the edge of tumult and Spain may soon approach a similar border when Franco dies. Japan's dynamism shows signs of dissolving like a wet noodle; South Asia is disinte-grating; much of Africa starves; and the richest oil sheikhs have accumulated so much money that they don't know even how to Look at today's roster. Chile, cent is not, of course, a democracy and infinition was already well over 20 per cent when Salvador Allende's regime collapsed. South Vietnam, never democratic, such a system being unfamiliar to East Asta's mainland, is at 68 per cent. and President Thieu totters.

Iceland, a nobly free little land, has attained 43.8 per cent; Pakistum is at 32.1; Argentina at 30.2; Brazil at 38.7, and Ecuador at 28.4. India is at 28 per cent, Portugal and Turkey are rivals at 25.9, and Japan is at 25.2. Greece's position is probably equivalent

Reviewing this list politically, Chile, South Victuam and Brasil are not democracies and Pakistan, India, Portugal and maybe Turkey could easily be diverted from that course. What ugly shadows lie in wait elsewhere? Even in staid, isw-shiding old England there is a small but growing off-stage chorus of voices calling for quasifascist law-and-order organiza-

Today's great inflation stems from many things not just oil prices. Recent years have accuscomed public opinion to rising desires for comfort that can no longer be financed. The world is filled with gobs of fake money or credit—equivalent on an exaggerated scale to marginbuying of securities two genera-tions ago: Special Drawing Rights, Eurocurrencies, various theoretical worths of gold. There is no valid international 'monetary system and excessive public expenditure is commonplace.

Vietnam Costs

Vietnam military costs accelerated economic weaknesses in the United States which eleverly exported its inflation abroad (as De Gaulle, no economist himself, brilliantly perceived). And al-though enough food is grown to feed the world, no one has yet devised a system to distribute it.
Atop all this the Arabs quadrupled oil prices and the pit fell in.

The only way democratic chiefs can extricate their nations from this mess is by firm, imaginative, andacious leadership: high taxes on gasoline and big cars; encouragement of energy saving on such things as air-conditioning; rigid penalties for violations; shifts to new energy sources.

We are not getting that kind of talk anywhere: only cosmetics and blabbermouthing. Let us not forget that the Great Depression of the 1930s produced in Rosses vell's New Deal radical social reform that saved American democracy; and also Hitler's Nazism which wrecked the world.

SEATTLE-You can't pick up a newspaper these days without getting scared to death over what the "mad" geneticists have in store for us. We read that if we fall to stop them, the human race will rapidly become a hand of organisms ruled by a few unspeakable tyrants

How real are the bogeymen of heredity? Take cloning, Most per-ple think that that is frightening: Cloning involves the placement of a nucleus from an adult body cell into an untertilized egg from the same species. The nu-cleus will then direct the development of the egg into a fullfledged organism that is a genetic earbon copy of the donor of

Cloning is easily accomplished with carrot seeds, but is only successful in about 3 per cent of attempts using frog eggs. Because mammalian eggs are so tiny, the procedure has not yet been performed in mammals; however, it's reasonable to assume that the chnological problems can in time be overcome. And then, we are led to believe, dictators will. possess a truly awful weapon.

not the innovation in the reproductive process itself but rather the control of reproduction by government. As with cloning, the fears of governmental misuse constitute a faise issue. Rulers simply do not need high-powered genetic know-how to perpetrate hideons atrocities on people. In vitro fertilization is a concept with great promise far beyond the obvious application to women who are sterile because of blocked fallonian tubes. The study of eggs and very early embryos could provide invaluable information concerning the causes of chromosomal diseases. In addition, we unight eventually develop the ability to routinely recognize severe developmental defects in in vitro embryos during the two-week in-terval between fertilization and implantation in the mother's uterus

Imagine a society whose normal reproductive practice involved in vitro fertilization and preimplantational screening. Then suppose a few individuals were to suggest that it might be nice to produce bebier by sexual intercourse, a procedure known to carry a risk of 3 per cent of serious mental or physical impairment of the newborn. The money started to pour into Swiss bank vaults around 1930 when, faced with the tide of Nazism and anti-Semitism in Germany, thousands of Jews began to transfer valuables abroad

Not only cash flowed into neutral Switzerland, Furniture, paintings, jewelry, share certifi-cates and other documents were hurriedly sent to Swiss lawyers or personal acquaintances with tructions to pass them on to relatives if the owner were killed.

After the war those who managed to escape collected their belongings. The relatives of those who died or were missing picked up some more. But according to the Swiss Federal Office for the Possessions of Disinherited Foreigners there re-mained 10 million france in 1963.

Since then about eight million francs has been handed over to legitimate heirs, and the cabinet proposal, which seems certain to be adopted, is that two-thirds of the remaining two million should go to the Jewish federation and one-third to the International Red Cross Committee.

"Many of those who put their savings into Swiss banks died terrible deaths at the hands of the Nazis. They were not only in Gercupied countries like Austria and Poland," Mr. Guggenheim said. He added that one cause of the vast discrepancy between the sums mentioned could be that on the outbreak of war in 1939 thousands of Jews removed their money from banks in this country to Britain and the United States, because they feared that Germany would invade Switzer-

Traditionally wary of betraying customers' secrets, the banks showed initial hesitance about helping the government agency trace the cash, but they were adamant that everything has now been declared.

An irony was that if the money had been placed in deposit accounts it would by now have earned huge interest payments. But most of the depositors were ultracautious and placed their cash in bank safes so it did not qualify for interest.

Official Says Portugal Faces Record Deficit in Payments

LISBON, Oct. 29 (AP) .- The to a 15-per-cent drop in foreign Portuguese finance minister disclosed today that his country had serious problems with its balance of payments, inflation, employment and general business con-

Jose da Silva Lopes said most of this was the fault of international economic conditions and not the new regime that swept into power when the dictatorship was toppled last spring.

Mr. Silva Lopes forecast in an interview that Portugal's balanceof-payments deficit in 1974 would be between $500 million and $500 million, a record for a cation that customarily has had a payments surplus.

The finance minister said that inflation for the year ending cext December would be 'no mure

The finance minister also said that both at home and abroad business confidence in the Fortuguese economy was weak and that a restoration of onfidence would only be gradual.

"Most of our difficulties," he continued, "come from the bad international economic situation through which we are living."

Following a balance of payments surplus of $350 million last year, Mr. Silva Lopes said, Portugal's payments position was hampered by the steep price rises for oil and raw materials so that by the time of the April 25 revolution the country already had s deficit of $380 million for this

He said the present deficit was about $420 million, "which means that the increase for the past six months was $140 million against $280 million for the first third

After Speech by Kaunda South Africa Grows Optimistic Over Links to Black Nations

By Peter Younghusband

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 29 (WP). -The mood is optimistic in govgriment circles here over Zambia's conciliatory reaction to a speech by South African Prime Minister John Vorster in which he made a strong bid for peaceful cooperation among states in southern Africa.

In a weekend response-draatically different from past hostile attitudes toward South Africa—President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia described Mr. Vorsier's speech as "the voice of reason for which Africa and the rest of the world have been waiting."

Willing Partner

In an interview with the newspaper, published yesterday, Mr. Vorster said he welcomed any initiative for the de-escalation of the struggle in southern Africa. Any person who wanted to would find him a willing partner, he said.

"It appears as if the President of Zambia is available for such action and this is welcomed by me," Mr. Vorster said,

added: "If my interpretation of laterally more than eight years President Kaunda's statement is ago. correct it is possible that we are on the threshold of peace, co-

There has been no reference, however, to President Kaunda's condition that the South African government withdraw from Rhodesia the strong contingent of South African prlice bolstering the Rhodesian security forces against Zambia-based guerrillas attempting to overthrow white

If President Kaunda, who wields considerable influence at the Organization of African Unity, were prepared to offer himself as a bridge for Mr. Vorster's diplomatic overtures, then other black African leaders may be prepared

Until the end of the festival (Nov. 3) these two operas will alternate with Mayr's 'Medea in Corinto' (IHT, Oct. 29).

If reception of the Mayr work was mixed, the enthusiasm aroused by the Massenet and Cornelius operas was, on the other hand, unanimous and huge. Both stagings showed what Wexford can do at its best: thoughtful casting, imaginative design-ing and-most of all-fine musicmaking. Jacques Delacote conducting here for the first time, brought out all the lushness of "Thals" but never rielded to the temptatioo to sentimentalize. This charming little opera, so admired by Liszt and the Wsgner circle, is rarely done outside Germany (an. not regularly even there). The libretto—an Arabian nights tale adapted by Cornelius himself—is a trifle, bu. a light and delicious one. Welf Siegfried Wagner, appropriately chosen as director, staged the work inside a kind of airy teut (the tasteful designer was Dacre Punt), usually letting the music work its own spell, without too many visual distractions. The opening scene was indicatively beautiful: the enamored Nureddin (winningly sung by the Turkish tenor Kevork Boyaciyan) reclining on cushions, his wistful musings punctuated by tactful, tuneful interjections of the chorus. Helen MacArthur wa. also a very musical Margiana, pretty and appealing. Albert Roseu condocted the hard-worked, but versatile Irish Radio Orchestra with a deft, sure touch.

Among the several added attractions of Wexford this year, Michael Aspinali's after-theopera recitals were memorable. Aspinall has already acquired a considerable reputation among connoisseurs for his daring performances of "Lucia" and "Traviata" (the title roles). In Wexford, his programs were devoted largely to Victorian music, slyly combining the most serious musitiful, and McKinney handled it cality with outrageous fun.

where he perfects his marksman- lines have been provocatively and vigorously dramatized in an excellent motion picture.

"99 and 44/100 % Dead" (at the Ermitage and the Bilboquet in English) opens with an explosion of comic-book illustrations to accompany its credit titles. This it ticks with unrelieved excitement. The staging of the atstartling introduction is the keynote. All the subsequent scenes, though realistic, have the wild, frantic leap of the savage, lurid comic book, and as an exercise in consistent style, the film has individual character.

Director John Frankenheimer's camera zooms hither and yon, scaring and swooping like Superman himself, over a gang war for control of the Seattle waterfront. Richard Harris stars as the hired protector of a ruling tyrant's domain. Now singlehandedly he blocks a caravan of trucks on a bridge at midnight, now he saves a girl from a time bomb, and now he battles with his enemies in an enormous laundry. Suspense and tempo are retained throughout in a grisly story which recalls the old serials in which the heroine was often tied to the railroad tracks.

"Borsalino and Co" (st the Paris and the Madeleine-Gaumont) is the regulation gangster melodrama enlarged to almost epic proportions. A sequel to the sful "Borsalino," tinues the adventures of a suave handsome underworld chieftaio (Alain Delon) and his escape from the avenging hand of a rival whose brother he has murdered. The scene is Marseilles in the 1930s, Massacres are common; theaters are bombed and one gangland moli is disfigured and blinded by acid. There are other ghastly episodes—such as the corrupt police chief reducing Delon, who falls into his clutches, to the status of a burn. There is a monotony to the countless punishments dealt out. But the box-office success of the latest "Borsalino" installment appears

Much more interesting is Elio Petri's "La Propriété, C'est Plus le Vol" (at the Elysées Lincoln in Italian), It is coarse, it rambles, but it is original. The film tells of a timid bank clerk, allergic to the touch of lira, who, a self-styled "Marxist-Mandrake." gives up his job to persecute a wealthy man to whom he has taken a pathological dislike, Petri they have life and force. Ugo Tognazzi as the capitalist and Luigi Projetti as his tormentor fit very neatly into their roles of carlcature design.

"Once" (at the Studio de l'Etoile in no language) merits your attention. This American film, the work of Morton Heilig, is a curious experiment and quite dazzling pictorially. Its setting is a paradisiacal island, and there are three characters: a blonde beauty, a fair young man and a dark one. None of the interpreters speak, but instead utter primitive cries to denote delight, anger or disgust. The situation is old-two men in pursuit of the same woman-but the treatment and staging here is of pleasing simplicity, in harmony with the extraordinary visual quality.

ENTERTAINMENT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (IET). This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films and stage productions:

Films

"Sindbad," a Hungarlan movie directed by Zoltan Huszark, "is well worth the attention of film makers and others who are concerned with the use of imagery film." writes Nora Savre. "The movie explores an aging roue's memories and reveries about the women he was involved with, circa 1900. The etmosphere of this movie may sound banal-but it isn't because of the extraordinary and very beautiful images that pour over the screen, intensified by rapid cuts. The visual enchantments of the film outweigh the very old-fashioned romanticism-which isn't exactly what one expects from Hungary," Sayre writes.

Plays

"Equus," Peter Shaffer's new play, seen in Landon last season. "a very fine and enthralling play," writes Clive Barnes. "Broadway has gotten a uew draws his characters crudely, but in the shock-headed, 21-year-old

Peter Finch," who plays a stable hand who has blinded six horses. " 'Equus' is a psychological inquiry into a crime. It is a kind of highbrow suspense story, a pay-chic and mythic thriller. Slowly the psychiatrist (in whose care boy is placed) investigates the facts and circumstances and pieces together the anatomy of an outrage . . . John Dexter has directed besotifully. The staging catches just the right element of court drama, mystery thriller and philosophical exposition. The performances blaze with theatrical life. Finch has the makings of a great actor. 'Equus' holds you by the root of drama, and it adds immeasurably to the fresh hopes we have for Broad-

"La Carpa de los Rasquachis" ("the Tent of the Underdog") performed by El Teatro Camsino, is "very much political theater," writes Clive Barnes, "It calls itself guerrilla theater of the streets, and its message pretty horrific. It is a cry anguish from Chicano grapeworkers in California, and it developed out of the original grape-workers' strike in 1965. "La Carpa de los Rasquacnis" seems to be a mixture of morality play, street theater and Bertoit Brecht, Brecht would certainly have approved of a key line in the play-There are only two kinds of people in this world, these who take us and these who are taken."

Toyota Raises Prices in U.S.

Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc., has announced price increases of 12 to 18 per cent on its 1975 Corolla autos and truck models from similar 1974-model prices. The dollar increases range from $320 to $461. The company, the U.S. im-porter of vehicles built by Toyota Motor Co. of Japan, said the 1975 Corollas and trucks will go on sale Nov. 15, but its other Toyota models will be introduced after Jan. 1 and have not yet been priced. Like the domestic auto makers, Toyota included some previously optional equipment and higger engines into some 1975 models and also eliminated its cheapest model, the Corolla 1200, which cost $2,299 in the 1974-model year. The lowest-priced 1975 Corolla, which has a bigger engine, will cost $412, or 18 per cent more. The $2,711 tag still makes the little car cheaper than its domestic competitors: the General Motors Vega at $2,799, the Ford Pinto at $2,919 and the American Motors Gramlin at $2,798. But the price boost considerably reduces the gap between it and the U.S. subcompacts.

Third German-Soviet Pact Signed

The third contract between Mannesmann AG and Thyssen AG and the Soviet Union for delivery of large steel pips against natural gas delivered from the Soviet Union to Ruhrgas AG has been signed in Moscow, Ruhrgas says. The contract envisages the delivery of large diameter pipe to the Soviet Union from 1975 through 1978 valu-ed at 1.5 billion denische marks. In return, the Soviet Union will deliver at least 25 billion cubic meters of natural gas a year to West Germany starting in 1978 and continuing through 2000. Together, the three contracts include the delivery of a total of about 3.5 million tens of large diameter continuous welded steel pipe to the Soviet Union in return for which a total of about 9.5 billion cubic meters a year of natural gas will be delivered to Germany.

Italy-German Pact Spurs Concern

Arabs Cautious on EEC Loan Guarantee

By Carl Gewirtz

PARIS, Oct. 29 (IRT) Bankers with close ties to the Middle East report great caution there to Common Market guarantees on loans Europe is expected to seek from Arab investors.

The Arabs reportedly would prefer a joint and several guarantee—that is, each member of the EEC promise to repay the entire loan itself, if necessary. This, in effect, would put West Germany—the wealthiest member of the Common Market in the position of "lender of last resort" for Europe,

However, this is a role that Germany wants to avoid. Bonn has said that it is only willing to back 44 per cent of any such

The minister, holding his port-folio in a caretaker capacity during the current government crisis, said the deficit for the first two weeks of this month amounted to some 248 billion lire ($370 million).

From Jan. 1 to Oct. 15 the overall delicit amounted to 2,933 billion lire, Mr. Matteotti said in an interview with the Italian news agency Ansa.

Oil imports during the first nine months of the year totaled 88.6 million tons, costing 4,600 billion lire, and the country's oil deficit by the end of the year is likely to reach a massive 6,000 billion lire, Mr. Matteotti said.

Japan Bevises Surplus

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AP-DJ).— Japan's overall balance of payments registered a $128-million surplus in September, the first such net inflow in 19 months, the Finance Ministry said today. Preliminary figures issued two weeks ago had shown a surplus of $100 million.

The turnabout in the balance of payments-the country reported a $513-million deficit in August and a $581-million deficit in September 1973—was attributed to "a substantial inflow of oil money" and to a swelling surplus in the merchandise trade account.

Finance Ministry officials have resolutely refused to provide any details of the petrodollar receipts, but they are understood to have taken the form of $500 million in government-guaranteed, five-year deposits in Japanese banks by Sandi Arabia and of purchases of lesser amounts of Japanese domestic bond issues by various Arab interests.

Earlier this month, the Finance Ministry disclosed that foreigners as a whole purchased a net $18 million of Japanese bonds last public of Italy and carry a socalled "negative pledge."

This, in effect, states that the ioan in question will rank equally with all other loans and that if any future credit is secured, then the loans carrying this pledge shall be equally guaranteed.

This was apparently violated when Italy pledged part of its gold hoard for the $3-billion loan from Germany.

Eankers say that a comma should have preceded the italicized phrase and acknowledge that as currently worded the letter of the agreement has not been violated since no bonds or notes

The Ferrovie loan, on the other hand, states that it "will rank parl passe with all other external indebtedness of the Republic and the Minister of the Treasury of the Republic, in the exercise of his lawful task, will not permit any loan, debt, goarantee or other obligation constituting external indebtedness of the Republic now or hereafter existing to be secured by any lien, pledge or other charge on any present or future revenue or asset of the Republic unless the benefit of such security is at the same time extended equally and ratably to" this

At this point, the only way to enforce the provisions of this pleage would be to sue the Italian government-a move that no commercial bank is willing to take out of fear that it will be blackballed from ever doing business in or with Italy again. The unwillingness of the banks to pursue their claim is reported to have made a hig impression on Arab investors. For their pert, they are seeking as ironeled a guarantee as can be had.

Fujitsu Also Reports Decline in Earnings

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AP-DJ) .-Nippon Electric Co. (NEC), 2 computer and communications equipment maker, announced today its first dividend cut since 1966 as a result of a 40-per-cent decline in net profit.

Results are for the parent com-pany only. Consolidated totals will be published later.

Poor Sales, Higher Costs NEC officials cited poor sales in the computer and wireless communications equipment fields for the sharp decline in net profit. Increased debt servicing costs, higher wages and steeper raw material prices also contributed to the disappointing result, they added. The company forecast its net profit for the half year ending March at 8.2 billion yen, down from 4.28 hillion yen a year earlier.

Another major computer and communications equipment maker, Fujitsu, also reported a steep decline in profit today. The company said its earnings totaled 3.03 billion yen in the September half year, down from 4.82 billion yen a year earlier. Fujitsu also blamed poor sales and higher costs for the drop in Sales, meanwhile, rose to 118.8 billion yen from the year-earlier 96.9 hillion yen.

.Unlike NEC, Politsu left its interim dividend at the 3 yen paid last year. The company predicted that profit in the second half would be down to 3 billion yen compared with 4.5 billion yen in the same period last year. The profit picture was also gloomy at Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, although the machinery, shipbuilding and aircraft concern did not experience a decline. Net earnings in the half year were 8.1 billion yen compared with 8.02 billion yen a year earlier. Sales rose to 549.5 billion yen from 454.34 billion yen. In related news today Howa Sangyo Co., a leading machine tool maker, said it is seeking to reduce its work force by about 13 per cent through a program of voluntary retirements.

Howa, the first Japanese machine tool maker to seek to out employment during the recession, cited poor business conditions as a result of tight monetary and fiscal policies.

An Anniversary to Forget: 'Black Tuesday' of Oct. '29

By Philip Greer

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (WP).-Exactly 45 years ago, on Oct. 29, 1939, the New York stock market suffered the crash heard round the world—the mfamous "Black Tuesday" that signaled the start of the great depression.

In that one session, the unheard-of total of 16.4 million shares crossed the creaking ticker tape as the Dow Jones industrial average plummeted 30.57 points, breaking the bubble of one of the most frantic speculative eras in Wall Street

Translated mto today's market, an equivalent break would see the Dow losing about 65 points in one day on volume well over 100 million shares.

Neither Biggest Nor Sharpest

"Black Tuesday" was nelther the sharpest loss the Dow has ever taken, nor was it the first big decline of that year—only one day earlier, on Oct. 28, 1929, the average fell 38.33 points. But it was the biggest loss on the beaviest volume the market had ever seen.

Less than three years after Black Tuesday, on July 8, 1932, the Dow tooched its lowest point of the depression years, closing at 41.22, a drop of 339.95 points-or 89 per cent, Black Tuesday was not the first sign that all was not right with the great bull market. The market had declined throughout the month of October, with volume steadily increasing. After the big break, prices rebounded until the spring of 1930, when they turned down to stay. In the context of its time, Black Tuesday was a debacle never seen before or since in Wall Street. But there are some who claim that the current decline has caused as much damage. Terms such as "creeping erash" bave been applied to the sent market, which has been moving lower ever since the Dow industrial average reached a peak of 1,061 in January, 1973. While the overall loss in the Dow is about 40 per cent. many individual stocks have suffered losses easily matching the worst days of the great crash.

THE NATURE OF LANDSCAPE DESIGN: As an Art Form, a Craft, a Social Necessity By Nan Pairbrother. Knopf. 288 pp. $10.

manmade forms, what can we, beasts of a concrete forest, find more attractive than the subject of Nan Fairbrother's "The Nature of Landscape Design"? Anyone whose heart has sunk riding due north from Richmond into Washington, through the condomini-ums, grim and high rise, will find this book a useful tonic. We are becoming lost in the land of Brobdingnag! Like us, Miss Fairbrother sees the inhuman horror of most modern city and suburban planning, especially as view-ed from the perspective of the landscape, which it inevitably ig-nores. Concern for ecology and detestation of much contemporary architecture are almost corollaries, but this is dimly perceived by well-meaning Americans. In the country they can estimate the damage, but not in the cities. The best of this book is the author's clear sense of damage to metropolitan landscapes in the past century, damage to the non-green landscape. It may come as a surprise to some that the writer of "Men and Gardens" deprecates grass and flowerbeds in the con-text of urban life, "a fidgety ligsaw of miniature units." Instead she appreciates the unique quality of towns, the poetry of hard surfaces, their "organic character. Stone paving in old towns, for instance, worn and weathered to the natural grain, is as intimately part of the organic world as the bark of a tree or the rocks of a seashore." She points out that indiscriminate enthusiasm for green is a very real danger Large spaces are anti-walker, and to explode towns with green creates a nonpedestrian environment."

But are towns possible today? The author thinks perhaps not. "A built environment without regetation presupposes a confidently humanized quality in building that we seldom now seem to achieve in our townscapes. Perhaps it is no longer widely achievable with the inhu-man scale and function of modern city structures. Could the 18th century have composed a harmo-nious scene of tower blocks and walkers, motorways and houses? Even the original squares now need trees to veil the alien alterations we have made to them." Her remarks on scale sound the clarion of the book:

"It is not only the incom-patible size of industrial structures that disturbs, but the incompatible scale . . . Thus though we may feel emotionally overwhelmed by inhumanly large masses, a dif-ference in size is perfectly comprebensible—it is simply the difference between a brick and a pile of bricks. It does not make us mentally uneasy. A difference of scale on the other hand, does. Incompatible scale in the same composition produces a particular-ly uneasy sense of mental disturbance—it is in fact one of the INHABITANTS of a jungle of most telling visual ways of suggesting madness."

I read this with the sudden bliss of discovering that I was not crazy, that indeed the rest of the world was cockeyed and that like Gulliver I had only maintained my human perspective in a land. scape of disgusting, overblow,

The problem with The Nature of Landscape Design" is that it ignores its own warning abou fidgety distractions in the shrubbery. Instead of developing further her intuitions about scale and the use of vegetation within modern landscape, Nan Fair-brother falls into the garden trap, and starts to enumerate plants and trees that do nicely in the English climate. Yes, we are grateful for details but not for the chummy sound of the local garden club and heipful hints for town and country planting. There is a confusion of voice here that is irreparable and thereby limits the book's usefulness. Nan cannot soar from her particulars as did Thoreau and too often her finger, which has begun to point to the far horizon, curis back around the coxy handle of the tea cup. Surely the difficult solutions to the landscape between forest and garden do not lie, as she seems to suggest, in slightly longer grass and an officient means to cut it.

So, it is not a classic and yet "The Nature of Landscape Design" is something more than just a handbook for planting shruba. Its careful explication of the importance of trees in the city made me want to rush out and hug the first green limb I met in Manhattan. The photographs are so ample and intelligently captioned that they constitute not only a valuable illustration of the text, but synopsis of its major arguments. Alternately bold and timid, Miss Fairbrother's is a book worth reading through but the readers themselves must take its best sentences and write on, think on, asking that question which must find an answer or, unanswered, drive us mad-how do we get our landscape into a form that givesus dignity as human beings? How do we make the cities, towns, countryside, ...s again?

It is both a help and a hindrance that this book is writter primarily out of English experience. For the English have a much more palpable tradition o civic landscape, a real feeling for human scale. The American temperament is akin to forests the English for centuries have been masters of the garden, moor landscape park. The Americal climate is harsher, less amenable scape that answers to thi climate. Alas, even Olmstead, America greatest landscape architect, pale beside that real genius of th terrain Thorean And it's signif icant that it is Thoreau rathe than Olmstead whom Miss Fair brother quotes in her book. Amei icans want the Indians back i the woods, the rotting, dangerou forest that English landscap planners cannot quite be con fortable with, Someday, perhar the Anglo-Saxons will hunger f Grendel and the fens. Americal crave wilderness, the untamed its landscape.

It is not all surprising that the lead-directing double generates a great deal of confusion since the two main types have diametrically opposite meanings. Against a high-level suit contract, the doubler asks for an unusual lead but against three no-trump he asks for an obvious lead. The obvious lead is construed to mean the leader's bid suit, failing which the doubler's suit, and failing which dummy's first suit.

West misunderstood the message on the diagramed deal from accidentally set a trap for the declarer.

After East opened one club,

North-South monopolized the auction. South's take-out double followed by one no-trump showed a hand slightly too good for a direct overcall of one no-trump. North judged that he faced a hand of about 19 high-card points, and jumped to game. What East intended when he doubled three no-trump is not clear. Technically the double asked for a club lead, the only suit bid by the defenders. West, however, supposed that he was being asked to lead dummy's suit, which KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 29 (NYI)—In the darkness before dawn when ordinarily only the textile-factory workers are laboring here. George Foreman will defend his world heavyweight championship against Muhammad Ali. Each gladiator has been assured $5 million to after his sleeping habits for the fight at 4 tomorrow morning.

The scheduled 15-round fight in what was once known as the Belgian Congo will begin at that hour in order to accommodate closed circuit TV locations in the United States.

Foreman and Ali each had a private audience yesterday with Mobutu Sese Seko, the President of Zaire, at his palace alongside the Congo River. The government of Zaifs supplied the boxers $10 million in order to project its image as Africa's leading emerging nation. It has spent another $15 million in civic improvements.

Unbeaten in 40 bouts, with 37 knockouts, Foreman, 25, is a 3-to-1 betting favorite to retain his title in the capital city of 12 million population. Despite the unusual hour, 60,000 Zairians are expected to fill the Stade du 20 Mai, a soccer stadium, to witness Africa's first world heavyweight title match.

African Chant Many of the Zairians will be chanting "All, bomay," using a Lingala word that means "All, kill him!" If the 32-year-old challenger were to win, he would be only the second man to regain the heavyweight title. Floyd Fatterson, dethroned by Ingemar Johansson in 1959, knocked out the Swedish boxer in a 1960 rematch. The referee is expected to he Zack Clayton, the chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission. Foreman weighed 230 pounds and All 215 at the weigh-in that sattended by 10,000 Saturday night.

"Some people say I'm slow," the champion said with a sly smile after a light workout yesterday, "but I get the joh done, sometimes quicker than most people. So maybe I'm fast."

Foreman has 24 consecutive knockouts. In his last eight bouts over a span of two years, seven ended in the second round, the other in the first round. His knockout percentage of 325 is the highest in boxing history. The late Rocky Marciano, the former heavyweight champion unbeaten in 49 houts with 43 knockouts, is second with 878. All, stripped of the title in 1967 when he refused to enter military service, has won 44 of 46 bouts with 31 knockouts. He lost a decision to Frazier and Norton, each of whom Foreman stopped in the second round. The challenger also does not appear concerned about the

If 60,000 spectators materialize, it would be boxing's largest crowd since 61,574 witnessed the Marciano-Archie Moore heavyweight title fight at Yankee Stadium in 1955.

Most of the income from the Foreman-Ali match will be generated from worldwide TV, mostly closed circuit. Henry Schwartz, the executive vice-president of Video Techniques, Inc., the New Yorkbased closed circuit TV firm, has predicted a worldwide gross of $25 million. The first Frazier-Ali extravaganza, in which each fighter received $2,5 million in 1971, is reported to have grossed $20 million, the most in boxing history.

Fruitless Exchanges

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK—It was front-page. This is not the same group of news the other day when Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow, although at the time he hadn't done anything but arrive. which a lot of other people do every day without getting a line in the papers. There was nothing surprising about Kissinger's The previous day's papers had said he was going to Moscow. which wasn't very surprising either, since earlier papers had said he was probably going to Moscow and since, in any case, he goes to Moscow as regularly as other people go to grandmother's for Sunday dinner.

After his arrivals in Moscow, Kissinger generally has "a fruit-ful exchange of views" with Leonid Brezhnev. The most recent visit was no exception, and in due course after the arrival stories came the unsurprising stories that he had had "a fruitful exchange of views" with Leonid Brezhnev.

We had also been told in advance that he was going to arrange a "summit" meeting be-Brezhnev and President This was not surprising The only kind of meeting President Ford goes to anymore is a "summit" meeting. After his "summit" meetings with economists at the White House and with the President of Mexico on the border, anything in the foothills-meeting category with Brezh-ney would have been unthinkable. This did not stop the weekend papers from giving front-page display to stories that a Ford-Brezhnev meeting would indeed be held at the "summit,"

Nons of this could pass for news under a strict definition of the term. News would have been a situation in which Kissinger, though headed for Moscow, had arrived at Kabul, had a fruitless exchange of views and arranged a valley meeting between Ford and Brezhnev.

Why all this attention to Kissinger's doing what everyone knew he was going to do? The explanation is that Kissinger, like Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, is a representative figure of a certain American culture.

He is one of those people about whom a certain group of Americans will read even when there is nothing to read about them.

QE 2 to Sail Today CHERBOURG, France, Oct. 29 (Reuters).—The British Iuxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2, undergoing repairs here after hitting a pier in a gale, will sail for New York tomorrow, 48 hours behind schedule, a Cunard Line spokes-

AMERICA CALLING

Americans, obviously, who will pay good money to read that Mrs. Onassis left the yacht at Ischia to take tea one cool day last

The two cultures—the Kissinger culture and the Jackie cultureare quite different. Members of Jackie culture can also tell you the present marital status of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. Members of the Kissinger culture regard such wisdom as triviality, but they can tell you the names of Talleyrand's nistresses and the last five presidents of Harvard.

To members of the Kissinger culture, the most significant event of the decade would be a breakthrough in the SALT negotiations. The Jackie culture would be equally stirred only by an authenticated UFO sighting or a message from the other side relayed through a psychic medium in indisputable contact with Rudoiph Valentino.

There are many other cultures among Americans, of course. There is the sports culture, to whose members all the foregoing will seem piffle. This might be called the Ali-Namath culture after the two men who never exhaust the sports culturist's capacity to absorb tedium.

As the Kissinger group can read about Moscow arrivals with limpid excitement every time, and as the Jackie group can absorb bulletins about Fifth Avenue strolls without begging for mercy, so the Ali-Namath group has the sinister power to dilate until dawn upon the distinction between pulled hamstrings and shoulder separations and how they have whimsically changed the course of human athletic events.

Sociologists could probably catalogue us all into our distinctive cultures by studying the people we are willing to read about on days when there is nothing worth reading about them. There are hordes of people in this country who will read about Johnny Carson's wardrobe, others who cannot slake an appetite for news of Mick Jagger's diet, and others who can sit through the night watching pictures of Hugh Hefner at the Playboy pad.

It is all a question of what you think is important enough to care about when there is nothing going on worth caring about. This is why, to a certain group of people, newspaper editors among them, Henry Kissinger's arrival in Moscow is big news, although it isn't news at all, at least if you are tearing the paper apart in a futile search for bulletins about the latest restate-ment of Evel Knievel's philosophy or whom Mrs. Onassis saw just before lunch yesterday.

We are not one culture, but many, and unlike Kissinger, we rarely have anything but a fruit-

First Lady of India: Begum Abida Ahmed

By Judith Weinraub NEW DELEI (NYT) -- In the past few weeks the first lady of India has esten kebahs with the Shah of Iran; she has exchanged views with President Omar Bongo of Gabon; this wee': she has been hostess to U.S. Secretary of State Kis-singer and his wife, Nancy.

The first lady of India is not Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, She is Begum Abida Ahmed, the wife of the recently elected President of India, Fakhruddin All Ahmed. And she is the first wife of an Indian President to want to take an active role in

That life would seem a bit daunting, even for Mrs. Ahmed, whose busband has been in politics all of the 29 years of their married life.

For as the wifs of the fifth President of India, Mrs. Ahmed presides over an estate of nearly 10,000 people. She lives in Rashtrapati Bhavan, the pala-tial red sandstone and brick building constructed by the British as the residence of the viceroys of British India. She is constantly busy with official engagements or attending to the needs of state visitors, leaving Mrs. Gandhi freer to attend to the real matters of state.

President Ahmed was elected by secret ballot this August by Indian legislators. He had run for office as the candidate of Prime Minister Gandhi's ruling Congress party.

The Indian constitution technically names the President as head of state, to be sided and advised by a council of minis-ters. But traditionally the Prime Minister has headed the government, yielding to the President a largely ceremonial and decorative function. In the 27-year history of the republic, Mr. Ahmed has been preceded by only four other Presidents, none of whose wives chose to participate in the rituals of office. The wife of the first President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, had trouble with her health and preferred to eat in her private chambers. The wife of Dr. Zakir Husain India's third President. was an orthodox who observed purdah, the Muslim practice of secluding women from public observation. The second President, Dr.

Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, was a widower. And Mrs. V. V. Giri, th. wife of the most recent President, was an elderly woman in frail health who preferred writing devotional poetry to the clamor of diplo-Therefore when Mrs. Ahmed greeted guests at a state banquet for the Shah of Iran early in October, she was the first hostess the 104-foot-long banquet hall has seen since the departure of the British Raj. Mrs. Ahmed, a short brunette friendly smile, has found herself in the political arena all her married life, and isn't about to give it up now.

"My husband was in prison when our marriage was arranged," she said readily in an interview the other day in her private study in the north wing of the President's pelace.

"Of course, we all thought we knew the British time was end-ing, but we had no idea of was really to come. But even then I was propared—there was no certainty for him not to go to prison again." Mr. Ahmed, who is 18 years older than his wife, was released from prison in March, 1945. Mrs. Ahmed, the artistic, welleducated daughter of a Muslim civil servant and writer, soon after graduated from college, Contrary to the strict customs of Muslim-arranged marriages of their era, the couple was allowed to meet before they married the following Novem-quainted with a different set of customs—those of political life in India. "It was a new life," she said. "But there was always so much love and affection for my husband it was easier to adjust to."

One of the unusual aspects of Indian political life Mrs. Ahmed had to deal with was the with dark-brown eyes and a habit total strangers had of "My busband is a public man. People were always coming to see him. They even came into the bedroom. They just opened the door and walked in. It was a little hard to get used to at first-but now I am used to anything," she said proudly.

Since their move into Rashtrapati Bhavan, that kind of intrusion is no longer possible. Like th: home of any head of state, however symbolic, their home is carefully guarded both by a police regiment and by an elite military unit known as the President's Bodyguard, all of whom are 6 feet tall, and who are known for their athletic pointments, and I can't just go but. I haven't been shopping since we moved here. But one has to observe certain things." she said without the slightest

Part of her new privacy is dictated by the imposing physical structure of Rashtrapati Bhavan itself. The monumental architectural complex, of which times thought of as the swan song of the British Empire.

In contrast, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi lives in a modest bungalow that might be mistaken for the home of a private citizen, were it not for the impressive guards outside.

Built by the British and once occu, ied by British viceroys, the 240-room building, its estate and its staff, all of which are expensive to maintain, have proved something of an embarra:sment for a developing nation (India's first Prime Minister, Jawaharial Nebru, even considered using it as a national museum or a hotel.) But none of this seems to faze Mrz. Ahmed. She is clearly pleased to find berself in such comfortable surroundings. She has made their quarters in the north wing into a home for her husband and children. Their youngest son, who is lives with them. Their daughter, who recently joined them when she returned to India to have her first child, a son, ordinarily lives in Jacksonville, Fla., with her husband, who is a doctor. Their oldest son is a cardiologist in New York. Because President Ahmed at 69 is so much older than his wife, more of the entertaining than usual may fall to her. When pressed she laments that she has been kept so busy with official engagements that she has had no time for what she describes as her hobbles; painting in varied styles, sculpture-ing in varied styles, sculpture-portrait busts, which she learn-ed to do at the Art Students League when her husband was culptural arrangements of which she is extremely proud.

Like the British royalty on which their roles are patterned, President and Mrs. Ahmed will continue to greet foreign visito s and preside at garden parties. She will participate in social and charitable organizations as she always has, and will try to make state visitors comfortable.

Since she witnessed a great deal of hunger during the controversial years when her husband was food minister—per-haps India's most demanding job—she is particularly con-scious of not setting too grand Although India's Guest Con-
